COMPUTER BUREAU System Ordered For City

In less than 12 months, Christchurch should become the first city in New Zealand to have a privately-owned computer bureau offering complete computer facilities to the business community.

A Burroughs B200 electronic computer system has been ordered for early delivery by a Christchurch company of four firms of public accountants.

The cost of the computer will be more than £100,000, and it will be the largest and most powerful computer in Christchurch.

Input to the system will be from punched cards and-or punched paper tape to suit the needs of customers, and the line printer is capable of printing out the results at a speed of 700 lines a minute.

Magnetic tapes will be used for the storage of master files and data can be read to or from these tapes at the rate of 66,000 characters a second.
